Brief Report	The Animal Welfare Committee held a meet and greet with the committee on November 23rd and 24th. Students and teachers were drawn to the event, which was held in strategic locations like the Chandragupta Amphitheatre and the Library steps at Plaza. The goal of this event was to provide students an opportunity to witness how various subcommittees within the AWC operate, ranging from feeding and medical to events, finance, and social media. There were lots of exciting interactive activities, including making a paw mould of your favourite campus dog or having a canvas painted by them. There were tote bags, doodles, polaroids, A4 cartoon posters of our pets, bookmarks, and little stickers. Over the course of two days, we were able to answer quite a few questions and doubts that students and even some professors had about the committee and its workings. Overall, the event turned out to be quite a success. The committee aimed to have a mainly interaction based event and the student's love and support for the committee helped them accomplish just that.
